Creditors crowding us to the wall, BANKRUPTCY STARING US IN THE FACE, our bills must be paid. We must have money to pay them. WE WANT NO ASSIGNEE to run our business. Cash we want; cash we will have. This week you can buy Clothing, Hats, and Furnishing Goods for less than one-half actual value. Owing to a backward season and the usual depression of business during a Presidential year our immense establishment is packed with goods. Shall we sit still and pray for better times? Not much. "The Lord helps those who help themselves." If trade don't come of its own will "WE MAKE IT COME. Our immense stock has been mowed down to such RIDICULOUSLY LOW PRICES that it is almost giving goods away.

EDUCATION IN ENGLAND.

GREAT CHANGES MADE SINCE 1870 WITH THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Talk with the Chief Inspector of the Training Colleges of England—The Great Public Examinations—Manual Training—Reading of Young Women in the Schools—Queen Victoria Expected the Schools—Readings of the Irish Question Serious.

A London Englishman left Chicago yesterday. Mr. J. G. Fitch, Chief Inspector of Training Colleges of Elementary schools throughout the city yesterday on his way to England. His home is a handsome one in Wimbledon, a suburb to aristocratic quality. It is to this, to 1871 that dates to do with the framing of Mr. Forster's Elementary Education act, which revolutionized the English school system. It is he who, at all meetings of educationists, is first consulted by the Ministry's Government. He has been for twenty years an examiner for the Indian civil service, and in preparing men to govern that portion of England to obtain the merits or defects of competitive examinations.

"Sir," he said, as he sat in the parlors of the Palmer House, with white locks, smoothly brushed for the day, "in point of fact of pleasure. If I was enabled to inspect your schools I should have visited your schools. I have witnessed a meeting of New England schoolmasters at New York, and was delighted with the enthusiasm which they showed in sacrificing their brief holiday for a public purpose. I have noted with many friends and fellow-workers, and was much in sympathy with the views of the chief secretary. I could not knowingly make a comparison of the city."

"What you make a report on your return?"

"I shall probably jot down my observations."

"What has been the recent progress of education in England?"

"Great. Wonderful. The school boards have proved a wonderful success. Indeed, more probably more than before the year 1870 the elementary schools of England were supported by voluntary subscriptions, or by the ignorant fathers, which, to a pleasure, of the children. The progress of the Forster's bill was at first very slow, but it gradually gained ground, and now, more than one-quarter of the population of London."

"Are there any figures showing?"

"Yes, some very special enquiries have been made which show that before the year 1870 the elementary schools of England were supported by voluntary subscriptions, or by the ignorant fathers, which, to a pleasure, of the children. The progress of the Forster's bill was at first very slow, but it gradually gained ground, and now, more than one-quarter of the population of London."

"Are the returns of the United census of the last year in the attendance figures, which, strictly speaking, mean only that the children were present at the time of the census, but the average attendance throughout the year. The return of the London figures for the year 1892 was 1,000,000 children in the schools, and the average attendance throughout the year was 1,000,000. The return of the London figures for the year 1892 was 1,000,000 children in the schools, and the average attendance throughout the year was 1,000,000."

"This Coat is made of Plush manufactured expressly for us. We GUARANTEE the Plush of this Garment not to wear off on the edges during the years 1888 and 1889.

"We also GUARANTEE the Inside to be the best Satisfaction of the purest ENGLISH DYE. We will exchange this Garment for a new one any time within two years if it does not wear according to this guarantee." The above guarantee goes with every Plush Garment we sell this season, Embroidered in the lining of same if required.

Proby & Tuttle

Real Plush bids fair to be more popular than ever this season. Certainly there is nothing so becoming to all complexions or so rich-looking, unless, indeed, the genuine Seal. But before the only trouble has been with the durability, liability to mat down, wear off at the edges, etc., caused by the strong dye acting on the Silk of the Plush. Even the genuine Seal skin is often weakened by it. This year, however, there has been a decided change in the manner of dyeing Plushes discovered by WALKER of ENGLAND. The Seal skin Dye is used, but changes have been made more suitable for Silk. Three years have been spent in perfecting it, so there is an absolute certainty that the dye will not rot the Plush.

We have made extensive arrangements for the sale of Walker's Plushes and have over one thousand Garments in stock, including JACKETS, COATS, SACQUES, SHORT CAPES, and WRAPS, plain and trimmed with Otter, Sealette, Astrachan, Bear, Black Real Seal, Monkey, etc.

Furthermore, in order to introduce these guaranteed Plushes and to make it an object to early purchasers, we will sell them from $5.00 to $50.00 cheaper than regular list prices.

In other words, $30.00 Jackets will be sold for $25.00, $35.00 Sacques will be sold for $30.00, $30.00 Garments for $25.00, $40.00 for $30.00, $50.00 for $38.00, $60.00 for $45.00 and $75.00 for $50.00.

To residents or parties passing through the city this offers an unusually good chance to purchase a Fine Garment at about cost. It will be only anticipating your wants a few months. As we HAVE THE GOODS WE MEAN BUSINESS, and we expect to do a large trade at the reduced prices.

All Cloaks purchased now stored free of charge until called for. A deposit of one-quarter of the cost of any Garment will secure it.

How the Keeper of the Bethlehem Baths Hit Upon Inspiration—A Colored Artist Whose Work Now Runs All the Way from Wall to Wall—When the Soldier Came Home.

Back to the aboriginal and the antiquarian the history of the cradle appears to turn this mentioned, says a writer in the San Francisco Chronicle. The derivation of the word cradle is singularly interesting and quaint. The ancient, according to some, is an Anglo-Saxon word, "cradol," which means a child's bed, but is now first applied to by an obvious derivation from the Latin "cratis," which means a hurdle, a wicker-work, or basket-work. The light wrought attachment which was intended to gather up the grain at the rear extremity of the wain or cart is also called a cradle, and it certainly has a curious resemblance to the child's cradle of to-day. Some writers on the subject have also traced a connection between the cradle and the coffin, and there is a certain resemblance between the two, but there seems no such connection. Besides the cradle of infancy, there is the cradle of the sailor, which is a sort of hammock, and the cradle of the miner, but in the other case the framework of timber which they use is also called a cradle, and in the former case, while a cradle, the ship does not in fact belong to the class of vessels which are properly called cradles, although there is a certain resemblance between the two. The cradle of the sailor, which is gently moved to and fro by the motion of the waves, is not unlike the cradle of infancy, which is rocked to and fro by the hand of the nurse. The cradle of the miner often rolled a considerable distance, and the cradle of the gunner has been by accident thrown overboard in a gale, and has been picked up by a passing vessel. The cradle of literature is the manger in which the infant Saviour was laid, and the cradle of the human race is the garden of Eden, which is gently moved to and fro by the Creator's omnipotence, but who is the originator of Christmas, or that "old fellow" as modern

Some of the great festivals of the early Church were the result of a singular combination of circumstances. Easter, for instance, was a festival of pagan origin, but perhaps Christmas owes more to accident than to design. Sometime after the Christian era had begun, and when the Church was increasing by great accessions from the masses of the heathen people, it was found that the 25th of December was a day on which the heathen celebrated their feast of the birth of the sun, and it was thought that by adopting this day, which seemed a natural one for the purpose, the Christians would be induced to unite with the Church. Accordingly, the 25th of December was appointed as the day on which the birth of Christ should be celebrated, and the festival of Christmas was established.

WAYS AND MEANS OF PROVIDENCE.

How Poor Students Make a Stake for a Long Way.

New York Telegram: A tall, athletic looking young man stood on the rear platform of a car on Fourteenth street the other day with a large suit-case in his hand. He was evidently a student, and was going to or coming from college. His face was tanned to a deep brown, and his whole appearance indicated that he had been spending the summer in the open air. He was talking to a companion who had evidently been his classmate, and was telling him how he had spent the summer. "I had a pretty hard time of it," he said, "but I managed to get through with a few dollars to spare, and I'm glad of it, for I'm going to need it. I'm going to walk to Boston."

"Walk to Boston!" exclaimed his companion. "Why, what on earth do you want to walk to Boston for?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the young man. "I've been reading about a young fellow who started out from Chicago with a dollar and a half in his pocket, and he walked to Boston and got a job on a newspaper there. I've been thinking I'd like to do the same thing myself, and I've got a dollar and a half to start with, so I'm going to do it. I've got a letter to a friend of mine in Boston, and I'm going to stop with him for a few days, and then I'm going to look around for a job. I've got a good deal of confidence in myself, and I don't believe I'll have any trouble in getting a position on a newspaper. I've been writing for the college paper, and I've had a little experience in that line, and I'm sure I can get along all right. I've got my trunk checked through to Boston, and I'm going to send it on by express, so I won't have to carry it with me. I'll have enough to do to carry my valise, and I'll be glad to get rid of that. I've got a pair of light shoes in it, and I'll wear them, and I'll have a pair of heavy shoes with me, so I'll be all right. I'll have to buy a pair of heavy shoes when I get to Boston, for I'll need them when I get to work

CHICAGO WINS ON THREE RUNS.

One of the Best Exhibitions of Ball Seen This Season.

Cincinnati's game was one of the finest exhibitions of baseball that have been witnessed in this city this season. The batting work of both teams was excellent, but Knock and Shut were slightly better than the "Clouds." The first two innings were the occasion of a wait on Shut to the end half of the ninth. That is not quite the fancy that "Luther" would have "Cincy to" think of the last half in running Cards, but he demonstrated the fact over the ball and the bases in a manner that would have done credit to a veteran. Shut fanned seven batsmen, and Knock six. Chicago's fielding was perfect, and Cincinnati's was almost so. Only one error was charged against the home team, and that was a very doubtful one. Two errors were charged against Cincinnati, and one of them was a very close decision. Chicago batted Mullane hard, and Cincinnati batted Knock hard, but the former's support was much better than the latter's. Two hundred people were present, and they were kept interested in the game from start to finish. Hanlon's men were applauded to the echo at the end of the game, and deservedly so, for they had earned it. MORE IDEAS OF INGERSOLL.

THE BLASPHEMY ANALYZED AS "WHAT TO DO WITH CRIMINALS."

A Good Time Coming When Society Will Stop Punishing Criminals, and Do More Think of Taking Revenge Upon a Man Who Steals than Upon a Man Who Has Consumption—Influence Supposed of Clergymen—No Redress in Torture.

NEW YORK, July 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—Perhaps of the most active of the foreigners in controlling the sentence of Mrs. Cignarale from hanging to imprisonment for life, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll was today asked: "What should be done with our criminals?"

"Criminals," the Ingersoll replied, "are victims. They are unfortunates. Most people regard those who violate the law with hatred. They do not take into consideration the circumstances. They do not believe that man is responsible under all circumstances. They do not take into consideration the effect of poverty, of ignorance, of passion, of opportunity. For most persons they regard criminals with feelings of revenge. They want to see them punished. They want them imprisoned or hanged. They do not think for one moment that without malice absolutely the same organic conditions which produce crime in one man would produce crime in another. Every man is a result. He is the product of his surroundings, of his heredity, of his education, of his environment, of his associates, of his food, of his drink, of his air, of his exercise, of his occupation, of his amusements, of his books, of his newspapers, of his thoughts, of his passions, of his ambitions, of his loves, of his hates, of his hopes, of his fears, of his prejudices, of his superstitions, of his vices, of his virtues, of his habits, of his actions, of his motives, of his aspirations, of his ideals, of his models, of his heroes, of his gods, of his devils, of his heaven, of his hell, of his everything that has contributed to his development from the primeval cell to the present hour. He is the sum total of all these things. He is the result of all these forces. He is the product of all these causes. He is the child of all these conditions. He is the slave of all these circumstances. He is the victim of all these influences. He is the sport of all these accidents. He is the plaything of all these chances. He is the helpless result of all these environments. He is the necessary product of all these causes, conditions, influences, circumstances, accidents, chances and environments. He is the child of Nature, the plaything of Nature, the victim of Nature, the sport of Nature, the product of Nature, the result of Nature, the necessary product of Nature, the helpless result of Nature,

APPEARANCES THAT HAVE BEEN AND THOSE THAT HAVE COME.

"The Comet" Closes Its Season, While the Stage on McVicker's Is Occupied by a Conglomerate Comedy That Divide the "Advent Singer" in Starring Fortune—"A Noble Regret" Succeeded by the Absolute End of the Museum Concerts—The Warner Week.

The Chicago theatres have surpassed themselves this summer in the variety and entertainment of the entertainments of a kind rather than their forte. "The Comet," which was a scientific course of Sadie's, was eminently fitted to please the politicians, who found themselves in a fair to the fascinating face of the comedian. The Chicago Opera House with its glittering reverse of the soap bore fairly away of "The Gentle," caught the fancy of the citizens. And they, it is said, had to succeed in order to be a prominent feature of the season. However this may be, it is certain that the real attendance of all spectacular productions are citizens, and there is no appeal from their decision. They have satisfied with the skill for and several glories of "The Crystal Slipper," and their parents and guardians have audibly urged them to help the Chicago Opera House succeed.

As a reminder of the appearance of ex-Queen Mr. Frank Mordaunt's "A Noble Regret" at the Grand is proved to be a reasonably serious spoken with good attractions. The Clark street lodge crowd with more and pronounced to encourage to the evening but a saving suggestiveness that was delightful.

"A Noble Regret" served five weeks and now with no suggestion to crime. "The Comet," it has departed from us. McVicker's had not been dead from with the summer's delightful travel into the suburbans, and this week it opened up and forged well to the front with "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It proposed to invite to more than one time a "royal time" between that attraction and "The Crystal Slipper"—and the empire the success which is said to have become the managers of the two theatres.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is to-day, as originally designed, to amuse an agreeable fairy tale, to bring the world to a conference, and for rest in respect to the hard-earned work, and the exercise of brawn in exercise. Then, every dream is accidentally connected, and the commonest of human beings is made to play a prominent part in the fairy drama. Mr. Shanley and his company are fairly well equipped for the work in hand, and the audience which greeted them on Monday evening was in the best of humor with itself and with the performance. The scenery and costumes are pretty and appropriate, and the music is tuneful and well rendered. Miss Lillian Russell, as Titania, the fairy queen, is the most conspicuous figure in the play, and she is a very pleasing one to look upon. She sings her part with much taste and skill, and her acting is graceful and spirited. Miss Russell's dress is very handsome, and she wears it with an air of distinction that is very becoming. Miss Della Fox, as Puck, the mischief-maker, is also a favorite with the audience. She is full of life and vivacity, and her acting is clever. Miss Fox's dancing is also a feature of the performance. Miss Marie Jansen, as Oberon, the fairy king, sings very sweetly, and her acting is graceful and pleasing. Miss Jansen's dress is very handsome. Miss Lillian Lewis, as Hermia, and Miss Ethel Brandon, as Helena, are both pretty and graceful, and they sing their parts very well. Mr. Frank Lawton, as Lysander, and Mr. Edwin Stevens, as Demetrius, are both good looking and graceful, and they sing their parts very well. Mr. Lawton's dress is very handsome. Mr. Stevens's dress is very handsome

A TEA ON A HOUSE-TOP.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS OF THE LATEST AMERICAN CITY OF FADS.

How a Subscription Tea Is Given and How the Guests Conducted the Idea of Entertaining—Crowding Together in Chinatown—Smoke, Lanterns, Talk, Women and Music, a Bathing, a Fine Opium, a Stock Man on Tea, and Those Who Are

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 3.—[Special Correspondence.]—Have you had any "Saturnalia Tea" in Chicago this summer?

That is a hypothetical fact.

Better not. It is the newest fad in this Queer town, that, as you see, is making its way of progress by means of absurdities.

It is an invention for the diversion of the "upper crust of society," and has turned out a splendid fad, you might almost put it under the head of Chinatown diversions.

Just a few years ago I succeed in taking dinner with the Bohemians of the Bay. The Bohemians, Willoughby a curious set. The Bohemians and I is nothing. The Bohemians! What ever will be the fate of the Bohemians? Will they perish from the earth like the dodo or become extinct like mastodons?

Silence, I said. The house, a charming one in a fashionable street, in the shape of most a pleasant manor and dated in the middle of which one is sure to smell it on of pleasant scents. The door was ordering guests arrive. There was assembled that gay and light to be observed that furnished a much gas on the hallway. A man parlor, however, standing near the doorway underneath stairs ran. "Gentlemen's apartments, exclusively male," sense, front parlor.

As I ascended to the above-bought attention I saw that the door to the drawing-room was open, and, entering so, I observed what seemed to be tropical scene on the stage of a theater. Upon the broad and high window, which, however, were covered with palms, ferns, and other tropical plants and a subdued light.

I was in the act of saying, "Thought I—I am in the Bohemian Club, I don't know what I am," when I was interrupted by a voice which I recognized as that of a friend of mine, who is a leading member of the Bohemian Club, and whom I had not seen for some months. I was delighted to see him, and, after the usual greetings, he said: "Come with me, old boy, and I will show you the Bohemian Club in all its glory. Come with me, and I will show you the Bohemian Club in all its glory. Come with me, and I will show you the Bohemian Club in all its glory. Come with me
